

PENN FAVORITE OVER COLUMBIA

Quaker Five Expected to Defeat New Yorkers in Game Tonight

WEST POINT GAME, OFF

The Penn basketball team has an excellent chance to move a notch nearer the intercollegiate championship tonight when the Red and Blue meet the Columbia quintet at the 35th-Street Heights gymnasium, in New York. It will be the fifth game of the league season for the Quakers.

The Jourdet players are flushed with the recent triumph over Cornell at Ithaca and will enter the Columbia game to-night with the spirit of confidence that is expected to overcome the general impression of the Red and Blue representatives.

The New York combination held the quakers to a 21-16 score in the battle in Belmont Hall more than a month ago, but it was the first game of the league season for the Quakers, and the young men of Jourdet were troubled more or less with stage fright and the injury of Captain Lew Martin, which occurred that evening.

The Columbia team is tied with Yale and will enter the Columbia game to-night with the spirit of confidence that is expected to overcome the general impression of the Red and Blue representatives.
